Hedges, Screens and Foundation Plantings

One of the most important function plants have in a landscape is creating barriers that protect views and privacy, as well as shield from noise and wind. They can also clothe unlovely parts of your house like foundations and utilities. By strategic placement of hedging plants you can subdivide your yard with “green walls” that give it a “room” feeling. These useful selections as a rule can take heavy pruning and shaping – as long as they are not cut back too low! The typical landscape size of each has been included to make selection easier for you.
